Our Threefold Aim: To give the news of Berea and vicinity; to record the happenings of Berea College; to be of interest to all the Mountain People.

Pig Clubs Are Thrift Schools

We have been urging our readers to practice thrift. This week we invite you to look at the demonstration of thrift on page 6 of this paper. You see the picture of the two club girls and their pigs. Read their record; read what their father says. Do you want your girls to spend their time looking thru the catalogues for "fancy things" to buy, or do you want them to be producing something worth while?

We recommend the boys' and girls' clubs. It will not take away from the higher appreciation of the really pretty things. On the other hand, those who want pretty things and have not the means to obtain them will acquire something gaudy and cheap, a poor substitute for the really pretty thing. The former develops character; the latter mars it. Let every boy and girl earn some money. Teach them to save and to spend wisely.

Being Loyal to One Another

At the Y. M. C. A. meeting the other night the leader spoke on "Loyalty". He developed the idea of being loyal to one another, having in mind particularly the student body of Berea College. In an institution like this where every student is expected to do some work, faithfulness in the performance of every duty is essential to the comfort and happiness of all.

If the dishwashers slight their work; if the janitors do not keep the buildings clean; if those who feed and milk the cows are careless; if those who work on the farm and in the garden idle away their time; if those who work in offices cannot be depended upon;—in short, if the students are unfaithful to their tasks, they make all the other students to suffer inconveniences and unpleasant experiences.

But, this is not a condition peculiar to Berea College; for folks everywhere are very much dependent upon each other. If the man who makes our shoes, does poor work; if the man who sells our groceries handles them in an unsanitary manner; if the man who builds our houses uses inferior materials; if anyone who does anything for us does not do his best, we suffer the consequence. Yes; and if we do not do our work well, the poor fellow who buys our product will suffer too. The best place to begin to improve this situation is at home. Let everyone do his work carefully and well.

MEXICAN INVASION

LATINS SAID TO WELCOME INDUSTRIAL LEADERS—BITTER FEELING MAY BE ASSUAGED.

Many Reports Circulated Are Merely Fiction—Some Assert That Mexican Nation Is Less Black Than It Has Been Painted in Past.

Western Newspaper Union News Service.
New York.—Early in February Mexico is to be invaded. A company of American business men will cross the border with the intention of reaching Mexico City and of remaining there for the greater part of the week. It is to be an invasion probably welcomed by citizens of Mexico and from it may flow benefits to both Mexico and the United States, which in time may serve to assuage the somewhat bitter feeling which seems at present to be inherent in some of the Mexican authorities. So many reports have been circulated recently of friction in Mexico and so many references have been made to the alleged jealousy of President Carranza toward the United States, that it is gratifying to learn from those who will take part in this invasion that Mexico is not as black as she is painted and that under skillful and wise direction, cordial business relations may be established between Mexico and the United States. It may be pertinent to state that in Mexico City a Chamber of Commerce has been established, whose members are American business men who reside in that city. This body has developed so rapidly in membership and influence that although it had only 65 members a year or two ago, the membership is now over 200.

CHURCHES GAIN 3,000,000 SOULS

America's churches have gained nearly 3,000,000 members since the last church census was taken in 1916, but there has been a marked decrease in the number of Sunday-schools and Sunday-school pupils, according to "the yearbook of the churches," which has been issued by the Federal Council of the Churches in Christ in America. Total church membership has increased 2,779,667, the announcement says, with an increase of 3,519 ministers and 5,350 church organizations. The total number of churches is now 233,831. There are 195,513 ministers, priests and rabbis, with 41,709,521 members of their various organizations.

Total Protestant church membership is given at 25,980,456 and the Roman Catholic figures as 17,549,324. It is explained that Protestant figures include only adult communicant members of a family, while Roman Catholic statistics represent the entire family. Estimating four persons to a family, the Protestant constituency would be more than 50,000,000 the book says.

An estimate of members of Jewish synagogues is 260,000 and the two Mormon bodies report a membership of 494,388. The largest Protestant body reporting was the Methodist Episcopal Church with 4,475,502 members, and the smallest, the Primitive Friends with fifty members and two ministers. The National Baptist Convention (colored) is the second largest Protestant organization with 2,638,579.—Courier-Journal.

AN IMPORTANT SERIES OF ARTICLES

Allow us to call your attention to the series of articles on "Problems Facing a Stricken World," which began in The Citizen last week and will continue for some time. Mr. Comerford, the author, traveled thru Europe for the sole purpose of learning conditions as they are. He went among all classes and in many countries. He talked with people of all conditions and ranks. He got information first hand. These articles will be of interest to all.

U. S. News

Washington, Jan. 26.—The Senate by vote of 36 to 14, today passed the Konyon Americanization bill which would require all residents of the United States of 16 to 21 years old, not mentally or physically disqualified, and all alien residents between 16 and 45 years old, who cannot speak, read or write English, to attend school not less than 200 hours a year.

Washington, Jan. 26.—By a vote of 9 to 5, the Senate military committee today approved provisions providing for compulsory military training for boys between 16 and 21 years old, inclusive, and ordered a favorable report on the army reorganization bill.

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 27.—After a red-hot debate the Senate today adopted by a vote of 18 to 16 the resolution of Senator Haynes Carter requiring Gov. Morrow to send to the Senate the names of the 314 "useless offices" to which he made constant reference while on the stump previous to the election.

The vote was strictly a party affair with the exception of Senator Hiram Harris, of Ashland, who voted with the Democrats, insisting that his constituents had expected him to carry out his party platform and that he desired all the information obtainable on the subject, while Senator Burton voted with the Republicans.

Capture of American army officers and Red Cross workers by the Bolsheviks is reported. The message is garbled and names are uncertain.

The Polish Cabinet has signed an order authorizing mobilization of the Polish army in expectation of a Red thrust toward the west.

Senate Foreign Relations Committee Favors Awarding Parts Given Up by Bulgaria and Turkey.

Washington, Jan. 22.—A resolution favoring the awarding to Greece of these parts of Thrace surrendered by Bulgaria and Turkey as a result of the world war was adopted by the senate. AMERICANS WIN FIGHT IN SIBERIA

Two Yanks and Five Russians Are Killed.

ATTACK HELD UNPROVOKED

Slav General, Six Other Officers and 48 Men Captured by the American Troops—Opposing Forces Manned Armored Trains.

Washington, Jan. 23.—As a result of a clash between a detachment of American soldiers and Semenov forces on January 10 near Palsolskaya, one general, six officers and 48 men of the Russian forces were captured and still are held, the war department was advised by Major General Graves, commander of the Siberian expedition.

General Graves described the attack as entirely unprovoked.

The American casualties were one man killed, one man dead of wounds and one severely wounded, while five Russians were killed and one severely wounded.

The opposing forces were manning armored trains. General Graves said the Russians attacked 38 Americans, who fought off the Russians and then in turn attacked. The Russian car and its crew were captured.

General Graves expressed the opinion that the matter could be "adjusted peacefully with Semenov, who could not have been responsible."

Vladivostok Tells of Clash.

Vladivostok, Jan. 23.—Factional fighting has broken out throughout Siberia.

American forces are withdrawing from along the Suchan mine railway and are reported to have been engaged in skirmishes with Siberian partisans.

A detachment of Colonel Morrow's regiment, which was preparing to move out from the Balkal district, was forced to intervene in factional disturbances, according to a report from the Czech staff.

The only Americans now remaining in the danger zone, where disorders are prevalent, are those belonging to Colonel Morrow's regiment. Their arrival here depends upon railroad conditions which daily are growing worse.

Clash With Czechoslovaks.

London, Jan. 23.—Admiral Kolchak is believed to be under arrest at Verkhne-Udinsk, a small town 240 miles west of Irkutsk.

Cossack chiefs and garrison commanders under the direct supervision of General Horvath in eastern Siberia have been notified by General Semenov of the new regime the latter set up.

Reports reflect a rather serious situation at Balkal, Kaltukshala and Mielovale, in Trans-Balkal, where Semenov soldiers have clashed with Czechoslovak forces. Peking advices would seem to indicate that General Semenov has comparatively few troops and that they are apparently disorganized.

Recent official bolshevik statements have claimed that there had been uprisings in the Amur valley and in the Russian maritime province north of Vladivostok.

It is reported officially that 20,000 persons have left Odessa within the last three weeks, due to activity of bolshevik forces. Lack of transportation facilities makes it impossible to carry the large number anxious to leave the city.

Corporal Killed and Privates Wounded by Rioters 65 Miles From Cairo.

Cairo, Egypt, Jan. 24.—Renewed disorders occurred at Tanta, fifty-five miles from Cairo. Rioters attacked an Italian patrol company with revolvers and bricks, killing a corporal and wounding two privates. The troops killed one and wounded several of the rioters.

World News

The first meeting of the League of Nations is being held in Paris and is engaged in the work of organization. All of the nations entitled to come by virtue of ratification of the treaty are represented by delegates. Permanent quarters are to be located in Geneva unless the previous plan is changed. The meetings are expected to rotate for a time and will probably be held next in London.

The demand of the Allies made on Holland to give up the ex-kaiser has been refused. The Dutch plead the lack of any law requiring such action and the danger that would come from refusing asylum to political refugees. It is suggested that efforts are being made to get the former emperor to give himself up voluntarily. The action of Holland is not a surprise, especially to the United States, whose representatives in the Conference did not favor the request.

It is reported that Japan has taken steps to return the former German territory in China taken by her in accordance with the terms of the treaty. The news comes from Tokio that the Japanese ambassador at Peking has been instructed to present the matter to China and express a desire for an early action. She also agrees to withdraw her soldiers from the Shantung railroad as soon as China is able to create a police competent to protect it and says it is her wish that this may be done soon.

A report of a Commission sent to Poland to examine the matter of mistreatment and murder of Jews in Poland has made it known that the acts are local and individual and are not to be attributed to the government. It is a relief to know this, as such acts would be counted a poor and unpromising beginning for the new Polish state. Mr. Morgenthau, our former minister to Turkey, was the leading member of the Commission and his authority is to be regarded as good.

The former leaders of the German war are deriving great profits from the sale of manuscripts to American publishers. Von Hindenburg is said to have got $60,000 for one book and he has several to dispose of. These military histories many people read but accept with allowance as they appear in most instances to be apologies for defeat. The many side-lights however are worth while, and as much can be read between the lines as in them.

An important religious meeting is to be held in Geneva, Switzerland in August. It will bring together representatives from all forms of Christian bodies for conference in regard to possibilities of some form of closer union. Such a move is in harmony with the times and will be among the greatest of all the forces for the work of reconstruction. The moral and religious element is realized to be more needed than anything else.

A great many Russians in the United States are now asking that they be deported to Russia. They say they are in sympathy with the Soviet government and are desirous of casting in their lot with the people of their native land. The government however assumes no responsibility for any except for those who advocate the soviet system in the United States where there is no desire for it.

A new find of diamond lands in Bechuanaland, in South Africa, is arousing the miners to activity and they are preparing in great numbers to go there as soon as the season is open. The finds have been very rich and promise to equal or surpass the famous Kimberly district which is about a hundred miles farther south. In spite of warnings men are giving up good positions in order to take the chance. This is the miner spirit.

Ex-President Poincare, of France, has decided that he will not accept any official position in the government as he desires to devote his time to reconstruction work in the region of the Meuse, one of the badly devastated sections of northern France. This is a highly commendable action on his part and shows a spirit of service to his country and people.

PRESIDENT FROST WRITES

Dear Fellow Citizens:

I write from Nashville, metropolis of West Tennessee. This is the seat of Vanderbilt University, and eight miles north is the sanitarium conducted by our good friend, Dr. Sutherland, who lectured on health in Berea at the opening of the term.

We were here two years ago at this time and the ground across the river from the Sanitarium was just being surveyed for a powder mill to be erected by the Duponts. The next June they were making powder at so great a rate that the Germans were convinced the Americans were in earnest to win the war. The works extend up and down the river, through the wide bottom, for seven miles and cost 150 millions. Now they seem a loss, but part will be used for the making of automobiles.

We all hope we shall get what we fought for—a secure peace founded upon a League of Nations. It is surely disappointing to have America behind the rest in this great enterprise.

I notice that Rhode Island and New Jersey are proposing to secede because of the Prohibition Amendment while Virginia and South Carolina stand by the Union. We think the Union is safe and the cutting out of liquor is already wonderful in its effects in increasing the comforts of life and the world's best business. This is a particularly good time for people who have been a little free in the use of liquor to "swear off."

This is Berea's crowded time. We hope everybody will be good natured and that the older students will see that new students are welcomed and made to feel at home. And we hope that there will be hard studying in every student's room. To learn how to study is the biggest part of education, and as an incentive to this are all our recitations and public exercises.

We hope The Citizen will keep home folks well informed about what goes on in Berea so that they will share the good things.

I wish I were in Berea.

Yours truly,
WM. GOODELL FROST.

THE MOUNTAIN VOLUNTEER BAND

Last Sunday afternoon in the Union church Prof. Baird lectured to about one-hundred enthusiastic young people. His subject was, "The Salesman," and had direct bearing upon the great possibilities of the country merchant who desires to efficiently serve his customers.

Most of those that attended the meeting were young men and women who are especially interested in rural community work. They are anxious to know the best methods of organizing and supervising the various necessary educational programs for that kind of service. The purpose of the Mountain Band is to train students who aim to do any kind of social or educational work in the Mountains. It is the chief purpose of the Band to acquaint its members with the difficult problems of their intended work, and to help solve them. Many of those that promote the cause of the Mountain Band are boys and girls who come from the communities which they plan to serve.

WITH REGARD TO THE ANNUAL DEBATE

An article published in The Citizen of last week, on the Annual Debate, has made the impression in the minds of some folks that the negative speakers refused to allow a summary of their argument to appear in print, along with that of the affirmative. We wish it to be clearly understood that we had no objection to the publication of our speeches, either in whole or in part. We feel that any argument which we could present before an audience of more than fifteen hundred people, and win a unanimous decision over that of the affirmative, would be capable of standing any criticism which might come from the readers of The Citizen. We did not refuse to turn in our summary to the printing office, nor did we hesitate to allow it to appear with that of the affirmative, but the man to whom the duty was assigned failed to comply with the request in time to get on the press.

According to the argument of the negative, the following things were brought out:

The first speaker made it plain that the question under discussion, was not one of unionism, but the enforcement of the Closed Shop; that the negative had no fight to make on labor or labor organizations and did not question the right of laborers to organize for their benefit, but proved by the Report of the Commission on Industrial Relations, that less than 25 per cent of the industrial workers of our country were in unions, and argued that it would be unjust to force more than 75 per cent into closed shop organization against their will. He further contended that it would be a detriment to the unions to force a discordant element of more than 75 per cent into their ranks. The opposition to the closed shop by the strongest labor organizations in the United States, was shown by statements from leaders of different organizations, included in the Railroad Brotherhoods.

Mr. Fielder, as second speaker, continued the argument by proving that the introduction of the closed shop would be disastrous to the interest of the employer because of the practices of organized labor in restricting the use of material; restricting the number of apprentices; and the limitation of output; and the use of the sympathetic strike.

Mr. Johnson, in concluding the argument, proved that the system would be unsafe, because of the radical tendencies of labor leaders; and because of the loss of control by the American Federation of Labor over its local organizations; and unsafe because of the jurisdictional strife and other unwarranted practices resorted to by the unions; a system which has been condemned by our government and recognized as futile by labor leaders themselves.

A Word from the Managing Editor

We hereby wish to apologize for the way in which the Annual Debate was reported last week. It is not our purpose to reflect in any way on the debaters of the negative. We did not mean to omit a very important item, that is, that the negative won, and won by a unanimous decision of the judges. And our own personal opinion is that the decision was correct, and we should have been surprised if the decision had been in any way different from what it was. Furthermore, we are not partial to either society. We consider that all debaters on both sides showed great argumentative ability. They compare mightily well with debaters of some of our colleges and universities that have 5,000 and more students.

Pugilist Willie Lewis Shot.

New York.—Willie Lewis, former middleweight pugilist, accredited with having brought Georges Carpentier, the French champion, to the fore, was shot three times by an unidentified man in a cabaret here. He was taken to a hospital where he is in a critical condition. Lewis was wounded in the left side, left leg and left groin. He was in a telephone booth at the time of the shooting. His assailant and another man, who acted as lookout, escaped.

Engineers and Red Cross Workers.

Chin, East Siberia.—Colonel Blunt and seven other American engineers, Miss Ford, Captain Charette and several other members of the American Red Cross and an entire Polish army, composed of former prisoners, have been captured by the Bolsheviks at Kilminkskaya, according to a garbled telegram received from Joseph H. Hay, former American Consul at Irkutsk. The dispatch from Mr. Hay was sent from somewhere beyond Nizhnjinsk, January 14.

Normal Department

Monday afternoon, January 20, the Normal Basket Ball Team played one of the biggest games of the season. They played against Academy and it was a hard fight on both sides, one minute Academy was hilarious and then Normal, but from the first Normal was ahead. The score at the end of the first half was 16 to 10 in favor of Normal; at the end of the game it was 18 to 22 in favor of Normal. All the students of the Normal Department feel that they helped win the game with their pep and enthusiasm in yelling and singing. From the beginning they seemed to feel that victory would be theirs and they were overjoyed to win. Huntley and Amburgey and Whicker put up a stiff fight. The whole team did praise-worthy playing and we are very proud of them.

Saturday night the Excelsior Literary Society presented the Philomathean Literary Society with one of their pennants. Mr. Morton Ratcliffe made the presentation speech.

The Union Literary Society met Saturday night and had an interesting program. One of the main features was a pie eating contest between Nutt and Jeff, who were Andrew Russell and Henry Todd. The latter won.

The Excelsior Literary Society also had an entertaining program. One of the main features was a debate. The question was "Resolved: That a Normal education is more to be desired than an Academy education." The affirmative won.

NORMAL WINS THREE IN A ROW

Normal will play in the basketball championship series again this year. That was decided by their victory over Academy Monday afternoon. Academy, having lost three straight, is now out of the final series.

Normal began by defeating Foundation, next they walloped Vocational, 28 to 18; and they finished by taking the Academy's scalp in a hard fought game. The amusing thing about it is, that the last two victories of Normal were won over teams who had already counted Normal out of the race. And talk of enthusiasm! Normal is simply bubbling over with it. The whole department, almost four hundred strong, presents a united front in staunch support of their team.

LEAP YEAR SOCIAL

Purpose: To enlighten the boys.

Method: Leap Year process.

Apparatus: Diamond rings, mittens, peanuts, pop corn, candy, music and an eloquent flow of language.

Process: Monday evening, January 19th, the Senior girls of the Vocational Department gave a social for the Senior boys in the girls' gymnasium. The girls first showed their bravery by making dates with the boys, something the boys had failed to do on previous occasions. They called for the boys at the Y. M. C. A. Recreation Room of the Industrial building and escorted them safely to the gymnasium. It was surprising to see how skillful they were when turning the corners and always keeping on the outside of the walk. The social was started by Miss Clara Terriil, the chairman of the program committee, by giving each boy a quotation and several pairs of pink mittens. The girls then gave a two-minute talk to each of the boys on their various subjects and in this time they were to propose to the boys. If Miss Haidwin, the English teacher, could have heard some of their speeches she would not doubt raise their grades. It was surprising to know how much could be said in such a short time, and some were so skilled that they made about five proposals in ten minutes. If the boy accepted, a ring was then placed on his left hand, and if he refused he gave the girl one of the mittens. Miss Eunice Darr was the lady who received the highest number of mittens, and Miss Bessie Parlee won the championship of this contest by making more proposals than any other girl. After this games were played, such as the Jolly Miller in which all took an active part. The refreshments were then served and they hastily disposed of them for the girls had to take the boys to their dormitories by nine o'clock.

Results: A jolly good time was enjoyed by all. Each of the boys were enlightened by the information they received. Since then most of our senior boys have reached a more mature age, and have come to realize what Leap Year means. They left in fine spirits congratulating themselves upon having had so many proposals, and especially to have the lady of their choice express herself.

Those present were: Miss Osa Miller, Mr. Guldie Reedy, Miss Piner Campbell, Mr. Inez Swan, Miss Henry Combs, Mr. Ruby Russell, Miss Ralph Darr, Mr. Zephia Jones, Miss Edward Pulliam, Mr. Helen Damron, Miss Paul Wiseman, Mr. Grace Disney, Miss Brent Carter, Mr. Edith Johnson, Miss Joe Eversole, Mr. Laura Dixon, Miss Earl Carter, Mr. Gladys Johnson, Miss Washington Johnson, Mr. Risse Oliver, Miss Robert Harrison, Mr. Mayme Cowan, Miss Bell Franklin, Mr. Gertrude Admond, Miss Herbert Waddle, Mr. Etta Bayer, Miss Joe Pierce, Mr. Hazel Deal, Miss Mark Clark, Mr. Mono Norris, Miss Job Hendrix, Mr. Edie Smith, Miss E. INCREASE PAY FOR TEACHERS

Chicago Board of Education Orders Substantial Raises for Educators.

Chicago, Jan. 22.—Immediate increases to all public school teachers are to be ordered by the finance committee of the board of education. It was definitely announced today following a conference between President Edwin S. Davis of the school board, George B. Arnold, chairman of the finance committee and Superintendent Peter A. Mortenson though the substantial raises scheduled will probably cause the prospective deficit to double.

TURK TRIED TO JOIN ENTENTE

Machinations of Enver Pasha Reversed Cabinet's First Decision In 1914.

Constantinople, Turkey, Jan. 24.—Turkey entered the war on Germany's side after the cabinet had decided to join the allies, according to statements before a secret parliamentary committee published by the newspapers. The machinations of the war party led by Enver Pasha war minister in 1914, were responsible for the change of front. Decision was reached by the cabinet to oppose Germany in the war and it was agreed that when Turkey took her stand on the side of the entente the Goeben and her sister ship, the Breslau, which had sought refuge at Constantinople, should be bombarded by the Bosporus forts. Enver Pasha, however, made secret arrangements with the Germans and the Goeben joined the Black sea fleet, even the grand vizier being kept in ignorance of this move. On Aug. 23, 1914, the Goeben, while flying the Turkish flag, attacked and destroyed two Russian ships. This act brought about Turkey's alignment against the entente. Even the sultan believed for several years that the Russians had attacked the Turks.

"Honor" Forbids Surrender, Says Note to the Allies.

REPLY IS SENT TO PARIS

Holds That If Former Emperor Had Remained in Germany the German Government Would Be Obligated to Hand Him Over.

The Hague, Jan. 24.—The official note of the Netherlands government in reply to the demand of the allies for the surrender of the ex-Emperor for trial is dated January 24 and reads:

"By a note verbal dated January 15, 1920, and handed to her majesty's envoy in Paris, the powers, referring to article 227 of the Versailles treaty, request the Netherlands government to deliver into their hands William of Hohenzollern, emperor of Germany, in order that he may be put on trial.

"In support of this request they observe that if the emperor had remained in Germany the German government could have been obliged, according to article 228 of the peace treaty, to hand him over.

"The powers, quoting as precedent the violations of international treaties and the systematic ignoring of the most sacred rules of the law of nations in numerous acts committed during the war by the German authorities, trace the responsibility, or at least the moral responsibility for these acts back to the former emperor.

Must Fulfill Duties.

"They express the opinion that Holland would not fulfill her international duties if she refused to associate with them to the best of her ability in punishing or at least not impeding the punishment of the crimes which have been committed.

"They draw attention to the special character of their request as having in view not a juridical accusation, but an act of high international politics, and they appeal to Holland's respect for right and her love of justice not to cover by her moral authority the violation committed by Germany of the cardinal principles of the solidarity of nations.

Her Majesty's government has the honor to observe forthwith that the obligations which might have resulted for Germany under article 228 of the treaty of peace cannot prevail in order to define the duties of Holland, which is not a party to this treaty.

"Her majesty's government, actuated on its side by inexpressible reasons, cannot view the questions raised by the request of the powers otherwise than from the point of view of its own duties. It has been absolutely foregone to the origin of the war and has maintained, not without difficulty, its neutrality to the end.

"It finds itself therefore confronted with the facts of the war in a different position from that of the powers. It refuses energetically all suspicion of wishing to cover by its sovereign right and its moral authority violations of the essential principles of the solidarity of nations. But it cannot recognize an international duty associating nations (some nations missing here) itself to the powers' act of high international politics.

Refers to League of Nations.

"If in the future an international jurisdiction were created by the League of Nations competent to judge a case of conflict on facts qualified as crimes punishable by statute preceding these facts, it rests with Holland to associate herself with this new system.

"Her majesty's government cannot to the present instance acknowledge any other duty than that imposed by the laws of the state and national tradition, the constitutional laws of its state based on universally recognized principles of law, and on honorable traditions centuries old, which has made of this country at all times a refuge for the vanquished in international conflicts.

"The Netherlands people, actuated by sentiments to which the world's history has done justice, cannot betray the faith of those who have confided themselves to the nation's free institutions.

"Her majesty's government would fully believe that the powers will recognize the soundness of these considerations which are above any personal appreciation and which moreover appears so preponderant that they cannot reasonably give rise to erroneous impressions as to Holland's attitude.

"FLU" SETS CHICAGO RECORD

Twin Plagues Claim 79 Victims in 24 Hours—Springs Out In State.

Chicago, Jan. 23.—Chicago's 24-hour influenza record was shattered as the twin plagues continued to spread throughout the city, and downtown reports indicated that the epidemic was becoming statewide. Two thousand two hundred and twenty-six new cases of influenza and 237 new cases of pneumonia were reported, while 48 deaths from pneumonia and 31 from influenza occurred. The number of new cases is higher than that for any day of the 1918-19 epidemic.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Living with his father on a small, badly managed ranch, David Eiden has reached the age of eighteen with few educational advantages. An accident in the autumn in which Mr. Hardy, eminent eastern physician, and his daughter Irene, are touring the country, brings a new element into his life. Mr. Hardy's leg is broken, and he is necessarily confined to his bed. Friendship, and something more, develops between Irene and David.

CHAPTER II.—Irene greatly enjoys the unconventional freedom of ranch life and her acquaintance with David ripens into affection. On Mr. Hardy's recovery the young people part with the understanding that David will seek to improve his position in life and they will meet again.

CHAPTER III.—The sudden death of his father leaves David with practically nothing but the few bare acres of the ranch, the elder man having through years of dissipation wasted the income. His debts paid, David goes to the nearest town, determined to keep his promise to Irene by acquiring an education and making himself worthy of her. He secures the first work offered, driving a team for a coal dealer, and meets a man named Conward, about his own age, by whom he is led into dissipation.

CHAPTER IV.—Attracting the favorable attention of the managing editor of a newspaper, David becomes a reporter. Eiden, acutely sensible of his good looks and general worthiness, falls in love with him, though, with the memory of Irene in his heart, David does not perceive it.

CHAPTER V.—David advances to a position of responsibility on the newspaper. Conward renounces acquaintance with David, for his own advantage. He sees the town is a better place for a reporter. David secures the backing of the newspaper for schemes in which he is interested, and the two, Conward and Eiden, go into the real estate business.

CHAPTER VI.—Naturally of clean mind, David determines to get away from his unsocial surroundings, and, Fale Stripes him into contact with Mr. Merton Dunham, who sees the inherent good in the boy and welcomes him in his home, where he meets Irene, his beautiful daughter, and begins the closest of friendships.

CHAPTER VII.—Both men become wealthy during the "boom," and when it is nearing its inevitable end David covers, through Miss Morrison, society editor of the newspaper on which he had been employed, that Irene Hardy is living in town, with her mother.

CHAPTER VIII.—The narrative turns to the Hardys in their eastern home. Mrs. Hardy unavailingly seeks a "brilliant" match for Irene, and realizes that her daughter's affection is placed elsewhere. Irene confides to her intensely annoyed mother her attachment to David Eiden, the Cow Puncher. The sudden death of Mr. Hardy leaves the two women with only a few thousand dollars, and Mrs. Hardy's health necessitating her residence in a drier climate, they move to the western city where David Eiden is a citizen of importance.

CHAPTER IX.—Mrs. Hardy enters fully into the "boom" spirit, and while engaged in purchasing a house from Conward David meets Irene again, and her mother. He vainly endeavors to prevent Mrs. Hardy investing in real estate, perceiving its disaster at hand, but she is obstinate.

Irene rose and helped her with her light wrap. His fingers touched her hand and it seemed to him the battle was won. . . . But he had promised not to reopen the subject.

In the street he said, "If you will wait a moment I will take you home in my car."

Their eyes met, and each of them knew what it meant. It meant an announcement to her mother that she had met Dave downward. It meant perhaps a supposition on her mother's part that she had gone downtown for that purpose. It was far-reaching. But she said simply, "I should enjoy driving home with you."

On the way they planned that the following Sunday they would drive into the foothills together. Of course they would ask Mrs. Hardy to accompany them. Of course, but it might happen that Mrs. Hardy would be indisposed. Irene was of the opinion that what her mother needed now was rest.

As it happened Mrs. Hardy was at the gate. She greeted Dave cordially enough. Encouraged by her mood, Irene determined to settle the Sunday program at once.

"Dave was good enough to bring me up in his car," she said. "And just think! He invites us to drive into the foothills with him next Sunday. Will you come? It will be delightful. Or are you feeling—"

"Mr. Eiden is very kind," said Mrs. Hardy, with dignity. "I have no doubt Mr. Conward will accompany us. He is to call this evening and I will ask him. . . . Yes, I think it very likely we will go."

The summer wore on, and autumn followed on its heels. The processes which had been discerned by Conward and other astute operators were now apparent to the mob which forever follows in the wake of the successful; but usually at such a distance as to be overwhelmed in the receding flood. The forces which had built up fabulous fortunes were now in reverse gear, and the same mechanism that had built up was now tearing down. As the boom had fed upon itself, carrying prices to heights justifiable only to the most insane optimism, so did the subsequent depression bear down upon values until they reached depths justifiable only to the most abandoned despondency. The rosy bubble, inflated with the vapors of irresponsible speculation, had dissolved into thin air.

Mrs. Hardy was among the last to admit that she had bought on an ebbing tide. She contended that her house was well worth the price she had paid; what if speculation had come to a stop? So much the better; her house was still worth its price. She would stand firm.

Mrs. Hardy consulted Conward. It grew to be her habit to consult Conward on all matters in which she found an interest.

"How is it, Mr. Conward," Mrs. Hardy said to him one evening over her funny work—for she practiced an indefatigable industry in matters of no importance—"how is it that there is no demand for property? You are a real-estate expert; you should be able to answer that. Isn't this city as good today as it was a year ago? Doesn't it occupy the same site? Are not the farms still producing?"

"That's just it, dear Mrs. Hardy. Why, indeed? Simply because the booster has given way to the calamity howler. Its psychological explanation is simple enough. The world lives by faith. Without faith there would be neither seedtime nor harvest. That is true of raising cities as well as of raising crops. But there are always those who ridicule faith; always were, always will be. And as soon as faith disappears things begin to sink."

"Ah!" said Mrs. Hardy gently. "So we owe all this—these empty houses and shops, unsalable property and everything to those who have lost faith—or never had it. To men like Mr. Eiden, for instance. You remember how he tried to discourage me from the very first—tried to break down my faith—that was it, Mr. Conward—I see it all very plainly now—and he and others like him have brought things to their present pass. Well, they have a great responsibility."

As a result of this discussion Dave found himself rather less popular with Mrs. Hardy than before. Dave accepted her displeasure with a light-heartedness that was extremely trying to the good woman's temper. Had it not been for his desire to spare Irene any unhappiness he would have treated it with open flippancy. He was engaged in the serious business of capturing the heart of Irene Hardy—a task made none the easier by the self-imposed condition that he must conduct no offensive but must wait with such patience as he could command the voluntary capitulation of the besieged. On the whole he told himself he had no reason to be dissatisfied with the progress of events. He and Irene often met together, frequently accompanied by Mrs. Hardy, sometimes by Conward as well, but occasionally alone. And Irene made no secret of the fact that she preferred the trips in which only she and Dave participated.

The gradual shrinkage of values to the vanishing point imposed upon Dave many business duties which he would very gladly have evaded. The office of Conward & Eiden, which had once been besieged by customers eager to buy, was now a center of groups no less eager to sell; and when they could not sell they contrived to lay the blame upon the firm which had originally sold to them. Although, for the most part, these were men and women who had bought purely from the gambler's motive, they behaved toward the real-estate dealer as though he had done them an injustice when the finger of fortune turned up a loss instead of a profit. For such people Dave had little sympathy, and if they persisted in their murmuring he told them so with becoming frankness.

Then there was Merton, the widower with sick lungs and the motherless boy, who had brought his little savings to the West in the hope of husbanding out his life in the dry, clear atmosphere and saving his son from the white death that had already invaded their little family. With a cruelly almost unbelievable Conward had talked this man into the purchase of property so far removed from the city as to possess no value except as farm land; and the little savings which were to ward off sickness and death, or, if that could not be, minister modest comfort in the declining hours of life, had been exchanged for property which, even at the time of the transaction, was valueless and unobtainable.

Merton had called on Dave with respect to his investment. Dave had at first been disposed to tell him frankly that the property, for which he had paid twenty dollars a foot, was barely worth that much an acre. But a second look at the man changed his purpose.

"I know you were stung, Merton," he said, "shamelessly stung. You are one of those unsuspecting fellows who think everybody is going to play fair with them. You belong to the class who keep all kinds of rogues and scoundrels in easy circumstances. You might almost be charged with being accessories. Now, just to show how I feel about it—how much did you pay for those lots?"

"Three thousand dollars. It was all I had."

"Of course it was. If you had had more you would have paid more. I suppose Conward justified himself with the argument that if he didn't take your easy money someone else would, which is doubtless true. But just to show you how I feel about it—I'll buy those lots from you, for three thousand dollars."

"I can't do it, Mr. Eiden; I can't do it," said Merton, and there was moisture on his cheeks. "That would be charity—and I can't take it. But I'm much obliged. It shows you're square, Mr. Eiden, and I hold no ill will to you."

"Well, can I help you in some way you will accept? I'm afraid—I don't mean to be unkind, but we may as well be frank—I'm afraid you won't need help very long."

Merton answered as one who has made up his mind to the inevitable, and Dave thought better of him. This little wreck of a man—this child in business matters—could look death in the face without a quiver.

"Not so long," he said. "I felt ever so much better when I came here first; I thought I was really going to be well again. But when I found what a mistake I had made I began to worry, not for myself, you know, but the boy, and worry in just what my trouble lives on. I have been working a little, and hounding out, and the boy in going to school. But I can't do heavy work, and work of any kind is hard to get. I find I can't keep going that way."

Merton looked with dreamy eyes through the office window, while Dave was turning over the hopelessness of his position and inwardly cursing a system which made such conditions possible. Society protects the physically weak from the physically strong; the physical highwayman usually gets his deserts; but the mental highwayman preys upon the weak and the inexperienced and the unorganized, and Society votes him a good citizen and a success.

"I had a plan," Merton continued, "half apologetically, as though his plan did him little credit—"I had a plan, but it can't be worked out. I have been trying to raise a little money on my lots, but the mortgage people just look at me."

"What is your plan?" said Dave kindly. "Any plan, no matter how bad, is always better than no plan."

"I thought," said Merton timidly—"I thought if I could build a little shack on the lots I could live there with the boy and we could raise a very fine garden. The soil is very fertile and at least we should not starve. And the gardening would be good for me, and I could perhaps keep some chickens and work out at odd jobs as well. But it takes money to build even a very small shack."

"How much money?" demanded Dave.

"If I had a hundred dollars—" "Bring your title to me tomorrow; to me personally, you understand. I'll advance you five hundred dollars."

Merton sprang up, and there was more enthusiasm in his eyes than had seemed possible. "You will? But I don't need that much—"

"Then use the surplus to live on." So the Merton affair was straightened away in a manner which left Dave more at peace with his conscience. But another event, much more dramatic and far-reaching in its effects upon his life, was already ripe for the enacting.

There were cases that could not be turned away with a sharp answer. Bert Morrison, for instance. Bert had never mentioned her "investment" since the occasion already recorded. She greeted Dave with the sociability due to their long-standing friendship; and her calm avoidance of the subject hurt him more than the abuse of all his late patrons.

Business conditions had necessitated unwonted economy in the office affairs of Conward & Eiden, as a result of which many old employees had been laid off and others had been replaced by cheaper and less experienced labor. Stenographers who had been receiving a hundred dollars a month could not readily bring themselves to accept fifty, and some of them had to make way for new girls, fresh from the business colleges. Such a new girl was Gladys Warden—pretty, likable, inexperienced. Her country home had offered no answer to her ambitions, and she had come to the city with the most dangerous equipment a young woman can carry—an attractive face and an unsophisticated confidence in the goodness of humanity. Conward had been responsible for her position in the office, and Dave had little thought to her except to note that she was a willing worker and of comely appearance.

Returning to the office one Saturday evening Dave found Miss Warden making up a bundle of paper, pencils and carbon paper. She was evidently in high spirits, and he smilingly asked if she intended working at home over Sunday.

"Oh, didn't Mr. Conward tell you?" she answered, as though surprised that the good news had been kept a secret.

"He is to spend a day or two at one of the mountain hotels, and I am to go along to do his correspondence. Isn't it just lovely? I have so wanted to go to the mountains, but never felt that I could afford it. And now I can combine business with pleasure."

The smile died out of Dave's eyes, and his face became more set and stern than she had ever seen it.

"Why, what's the matter, Mr. Eiden?" she exclaimed. "Is anything wrong?"

He found it hard to meet her frank, unsuspecting eyes; hard to draw back the curtains of the world so much that those eyes would never again be quite so frank and unsuspecting. "Miss Warden," he said, "did Conward tell you that?"

"What? About going to the mountains? Of course. He said he was taking some work with him, and he wondered if I would mind going along to do it, and he would pay the expenses, and—"

"There was a quick, hard catch in her voice, and she seized Eiden's arm violently. Her eyes were big and round; her pretty face had gone suddenly white.

"Oh, Mr. Eiden, you don't think—"

"You don't think—that I—that he—"

"You wouldn't believe that—"

"I think you are absolutely inno-

"I Think You Are Absolutely Innocent," He Said Gravely.

cent," he said, gravely, "but—it's the innocent thing that gets caught."

The girl had broken into violent tears. "Whatever shall I do? What can I do?" she moaned. "Oh, why didn't somebody tell me? What can I do?"

He let her passion run on for a few minutes, and then he sought, as gently as he could, to win her back to some composure. "Some one has told you," he said—"in time. You don't have to go. Don't be afraid of anything. Conward may do. I will settle this score with him."

She controlled herself, but when she spoke again her voice had fear and shame in it. "I—I hate to tell you, Mr. Eiden, but I must tell you—I—I took—I let him give me some money—to buy things. He said maybe I was short of money and I would want to buy some new clothes—and he would pay me extra, in advance—and he gave me fifty dollars—and—and—I've spent it!"

Eiden swung on his heel and paced the length of the office in quick, sharp strides. When he returned to where Miss Warden stood, wrapped about in her misery, his fists were clenched and the vein stood out on the back of his hands.

"Scoundrel!" he muttered. "Scoundrel! And I have been tied to him. I have let him blind me; I have let him set the standards. Well, now I know him. There was a menace in his last words that frightened even Gladys Warden, well though she knew the menace was not to her, but ranged in her defense.

"Here," he said, taking some bills from his pocket. "You must tell him you can't go—tell him you won't go; you must return his money. I will lend you what you need. Don't be afraid. I will go with you—"

"But I can't take your money, either, Mr. Eiden," she protested. "I can't stay here any longer. I will have no job and I can't pay you back. You see I can't take it, even from you. What a fool I was! For a few clothes—"

"You will continue to work—for me," he said.

She shook her head. "No, I can't. I can't work anywhere near him."

"You won't need to. The firm of Conward & Eiden will be dissolved at once. I have always felt that there was something false in Conward—something that wouldn't stand test. Now I know."

There was a sound of a key in the door, and Conward entered.

CHAPTER XI.

Conward paused as he entered the room. He had evidently not expected to find Eiden there, but after a moment of hesitation he nodded cordially to his partner.

"Almost ready, Miss Warden?" he asked, cheerily. "Our train goes in—"

He took his watch from his pocket and consulted it.

Dave's eyes were fixed on the girl. He wondered whether, in this testing moment, she would fight for herself or lean weakly on him as her protector. Her answer reassured him.

"It makes no difference when it goes, Mr. Conward. I'm not going on it." Her voice trembled nervously, but there was no weakness in it. The money which Dave had given her was still crumpled in her hand. She advanced to where Conward stood vaguely trying to sense the situation, and held the bills before him. "Here is your money, Mr. Conward," she said.

"Why, what does this mean?" "Here is your money. Will you take it, please?"

"No, I won't take it until you explain—"

She opened her fingers and the bills fell to the floor. "All right," she said. Conward's eyes had shifted to Dave.

"You are at the bottom of this, Eiden," he said. "What does it mean?"

"It means, Conward," Dave answered, and there was steel in his voice—"It means that after all these years—I have discovered what a cur you are—just in time to talk you, at least in this instance."

WADSWORTH BILL CALLS FOR U. M. T.

SENATE ARMY MEASURE ESTABLISHES MILITARY TRAINING SYSTEM FOR YOUTH.

MAY SELECT ARMY OR NAVY

Time May Be Deferred Not More Than Three Years—Male Aliens Who Complete Course May Become Citizens Speedily.

By JAMES P. HORNADAY.

Washington.—A subcommittee of the senate committee on military affairs has laid the foundation for military legislation in a bill approved by it and just introduced by Senator Wadsworth of New York, chairman of the committee. The proposed legislation contains features not heretofore included in military legislation in this country. One of these features relates to military training. It is proposed to establish universal military training as a means for Americanizing all young men of military age.

Section 51 of the Wadsworth bill provides that all male citizens of the United States (excluding residents of Alaska and the insular possessions) and including those who have declared their intentions to become citizens other than persons specifically excepted by the legislation, shall, at attaining the age of eighteen years or within three years thereafter, be subject to military or naval training, and shall be inducted into the army or navy for a total period of four months and for such further time as may be reasonably necessary for enrollment, mobilization and demobilization.

Choice Is Given the Young Man.

The proposed legislation accords to all young men who have reached the age of eighteen the privilege of electing in such manner and at such time as may be prescribed by regulation whether the training shall begin when they attain the age of eighteen years or whether it shall be deferred for not more than three years; and they are also to have the privilege of saying whether they desire to train in the army or the navy, and as far as practicable they are to be trained in accordance with their expressed desire.

Any male alien who has been a resident of the United States for not less than one year and is qualified to become a citizen in all respects except residence, and who, if a citizen, would be liable for training, may, with his consent and under such regulations as may be prescribed, be inducted into the service for training purposes. On the honorable completion of the training the alien shall receive a certificate to that effect and shall have the privilege of electing forthwith to become a citizen, upon applying for naturalization, within six months after the issue of the certificate to any court having jurisdiction to confer naturalization.

Vocational Training Provided.

The training under the Wadsworth bill is to include general educational training and vocational training in appropriate trades which may be necessary in war and useful in peace, such as scientific agriculture, physical training, instruction in hygiene, instruction in American history, principles and forms of government, and such other instruction and training as may be adapted to qualify those receiving it for the performance of their duties as citizen soldiers. The training to be given in the different areas of the country is to be adapted to their respective climatic, agricultural, educational and other conditions. All recruits for induction into the service are to be subjected to a physical and psychological examination, including such tests as may be necessary in order to determine whether or not their subsequent service shall be with combat or special troop units.

The regulations governing the military and vocational training are, under the provisions of the Wadsworth bill, to be prepared by a committee from the general staff. Each man inducted into the service for training is to receive pay at the rate of $5 a month during the training period, besides transportation, clothing, laundry, shelter, subsistence and all necessary medical and dental attendance. Citizens or subjects of any country with which the United States may be at war are, of course, exempt from the training, as are divinity students.

Reserve Is Created.

The new senate army bill provides that every young man after completing the four months of military training provided for in the bill shall become a reservist who will be assigned to an organization of the national guard or of the organized reserve establishment for the locality in which he lives, and will serve therein for a period of five years, when he will be transferred to the unorganized reserves. Under regulations to be prescribed by the president, any reservist, upon change of residence, may be transferred to the appropriate organization of the national guard of the United States, or of the organized reserves establishment for the locality of his new residence, so far as the needs of the service will permit. Each reservist will be assigned to or from time to time transferred to that arm or branch of the service which he may elect or for which he may be found to be best qualified. But no reservist can, under the provisions of the proposed legislation, be assigned or transferred to an organization of the National Guard of the United States without his consent.

The number of reservists who have completed their training in the training forces that may be assigned to the National Guard will be prescribed by regulations of the war department, but it shall not in any year exceed one-third of the maximum strength of the National Guard of the entire country. All young men who have completed the military training course and have not been assigned to the National Guard become members of the United States organized reserves.

May Be Trained to Be Officer.

While assigned to the organized reserves, reservists will be subject to mobilization and additional training for two annual periods of not to exceed two weeks each during their membership therein. Any reservist assigned to the organized reserves who desires to qualify as a non-commissioned officer or as a commissioned officer may take additional training. A reservist may be commissioned in the organized reserves for a period of ten years.

The grades and ratings for reservists assigned to or enlisted in the National Guard, or in the organized reserves, are to be the same as grades, ratings and rates of pay provided for enlisted men for the permanent personnel of the army.

The organized reserves under the proposed legislation will be liable to call for military service by the president only when congress shall declare that a national emergency exists. The maximum strength of the National Guard of the United States, under the proposed legislation, is to be approximately equal to 800 officers and enlisted men, or reservists, for each senator or representative in congress.

Make Ups of the Army.

Under the army reorganization plan the new army of the United States will consist of the overseas garrisons, the home forces, the National Guard of the United States, the organized reserves and the unorganized reserves. These various components will be subdivided into the infantry, the division, the army corps, and army headquarters, with their detachments and troops. The containing arms are to be composed of the infantry, the cavalry, the field artillery, the coast artillery corps, the air corps, the corps of engineers, the signal corps, the general staff corps, the adjutant general service, the inspector general service, the judge advocate general's service, the quartermaster's service, the medical service, the ordnance service, the finance service, the transportation service, the construction service, the chemical warfare service and the corps of chaplains.

Under the general scheme of organization there will be a permanent and a reserve personnel. The permanent personnel will be properly known as the regular army. The reserve personnel will include the National Guard, which is to be known as the National Guard of the United States, and the reserve corps, which will be built up through universal military training.

Make Up of Regular Army.

The permanent personnel, that is to say the regular army, will be made up of one general of the army, 20 major generals, 50 brigadier generals, 611 colonels, 688 lieutenant colonels, 2,292 majors, 4,584 captains, 4,355 first lieutenants, and 2,752 second lieutenants, the officers and enlisted men of the military service, the corps of chaplains, the warrant officers, the flying cadets of the air service and 263,200 enlisted men.

The base of initial monthly pay for the enlisted men is fixed as follows by the senate bill: Master sergeants, $100; technical sergeants, $75; first sergeants, $75; staff sergeants, $60; sergeants, $50; corporals, $40; privates (first class), $30, and privates (second class), $25. There is a provision that enlisted men shall receive an increase of 10 per cent of the initial pay of their grade for each five years of service, not to exceed a total increase of 40 per cent. The air corps legislation proposes, of course, all new. It provides for a permanent personnel of the air corps consisting of one chief of air corps, with the rank of major general and 1,550 officers and 21,000 enlisted men. Then there is to be a reserve air personnel consisting of all reserve officers and reservists of the organized reserves and National Guard of the United States assigned to the air corps units.

General Staff and War Council.

The general staff of the army under the proposed legislation will be the responsible head of the country's fighting forces. It will be its duty to prepare plans for national defense, for the use of the military forces for that purpose, both separately and in conjunction with the naval forces. It will be its duty to always have ready plans for mobilization of the manhood of the nation and its material resources in case of an emergency. It will be required to investigate and report regularly on all questions affecting the efficiency of the army and its state of preparedness for military operations.

The office of undersecretary of war is created by the proposed legislation. He is to be appointed by the president, receiving a salary of $10,000 a year, and in the absence of the secretary of war is to perform the duties assigned to that official. A war council, another new organization, is to be composed of the undersecretary of war and the chief of staff.

NOTICE TO CITIZENS

We are sorry indeed to announce that we must close the doors of our Sunday night chapel to all citizens of the town. Please look at the following figures and you will know that we are doing this because we are compelled to. There are 1736 students in Berea today, and the number is increasing daily. Our chapel holds only 4280 people. The upper chapel holds 300, making a total of 1580 people. It is impossible for us to get all of our students in both chapels during the Sunday night service. For this reason we have excused all town students from attending Sunday night chapel, but we must look after our boarding students. There is a plan on foot to have three chapels for Sunday night. If this movement goes through we may be able to throw open our doors to citizens.

FUGATE-BOWLING WEDDING

A very beautiful but quiet wedding was solemnized Dec. 24 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Bowling, when their daughter, Miss Addie, was married to Mr. R. R. Fugate of Cincinnati. The bride is one of Berea's well known and loved young women and quite an accomplished musician, having taught music for a number of years in Berea.

The bride wore a lovely gown of white satin and lace and carried a beautiful bouquet of brides' roses. The groom is a young man of sterling qualities and well known as a traveling salesman thru western Kentucky.

The wedding ceremony was performed by Bro. Hudspeth of the Christian church. Only the immediate members of the family and a few friends were present, the wedding being a quiet affair on account of the serious illness of the bride's brother, Grover. The wedding took place at 4:30 p.m. A light supper was served and the couple left immediately after in an auto for Richmond, where they took the train for a short wedding trip. The best wishes of their many friends go with them. They will be at home in Cincinnati after February 1.

(The above item was mailed to The Citizen the week of the wedding, but failed to reach its destination until now.)

THE steadily growing popularity of the Oakland Sensible Six among American farmers, is due, primarily, to the capacity of this well-made car for continuous and economical service. Even in those districts where roads are unimproved and garage facilities are few and far between, the Oakland keeps to its work day after day and month after month, quietly, competently, uninterruptedly. It is a comfortable car, exceedingly roomy and easy-riding; and because of its high ratio of power to weight, its action is brisk and responsive. Only immense manufacturing resources, and a production of unusual magnitude, make possible the very moderate price at which it is sold.

CHURCHES TO SPEND MILLION DOLLARS IN AN ADVERTISING CAMPAIGN

An Associated Press dispatch from Atlantic City the past week stated that The Interchurch World Movement had decided upon a newspaper advertising campaign in connection with its program of evangelizing the world. It was stated that leaders of the movement had given their approval to this plan, which will start with the church press about February 1, and include practically every medium of publicity, including the rural newspapers of the country, in an effort to bring the world evangelization plan directly to all the people.

The decision followed a three-day conference at Atlantic City, in which Dr. R. H. Crossfield, president of Transylvania College at Lexington, represented that institution. One of the aims of the Interchurch World Movement is to avoid duplication of work among the churches in the raising of the amount needed for the evangelization work of the Christian denominations.

BRITISH POLICE HEAD KILLED IN DUBLIN

Found Shot to Death in One of City's Main Thoroughfares—Police Ambushed, Kill One.

Dublin, Jan. 21.—Assistant Commissioner of Police Desmond was shot and killed at 6:30 o'clock this evening in Harcourt street, one of Dublin's thoroughfares.

When assaulted, Desmond drew his pistol and fired two shots in self-defense. He fell with his automatic in his hand.

Desmond recently was brought to Dublin from Belfast, where he had been a successful constabulary officer, to assist in coordinating the Dublin police and secure increased efficiency in the detective department. In view of the murder of several policemen for which no arrests have been made.

Thomas, Ireland, Jan. 21.—Another constable was shot and badly wounded last night while returning to his home here. Armed squads later searched the district. No arrests were made.

Kilrush, Ireland, Jan. 21.—In an encounter near here today a supposed Sinn Féiner was killed. Policemen were removing their belongings from the village of Coroneale to Knock in a motor van, when they were fired on from both sides of the road.

Four bicycle policemen returned the fire, killing one and capturing two of the attacking party. The body of the man fell into the river and was swept away by the current. The policemen escaped injury.

NOW GOOD TIME TO BUILD

Many Reasons Why Those Who Are Thinking of Construction Should Get It Started.

Building done these days is quite certain to be good building; better than the average quality in times when real estate improvements are more actively carried on. This is a point worth considering as an offset, in part, to high prices for material and high wages in the building trades.

Contractors are sure to take unusual pains to please those who give them business. They are not obliged, as they have been, at times, to put up with almost any labor, however incompetent, that can be found, even among tramps and idlers. There have been periods, such as the last year of the war, when the standards were so lowered that almost anyone who could and would work at all was eagerly hired for service which needed painstaking intelligence.

All the way through the various trades that contribute to the building of a dwelling or a business block there is a strong desire to make the work done so satisfactory that it will lead to more employment. All who have anything to do with real estate improvements are anxious to promote a revival of construction, on the largest possible scale.

These facts are important. They are worthy of consideration by all who are dealing with building problems.—Exchange.

Proper Homes Important.

To provide proper homes for the people is one of the worthiest objects of human endeavor. Proper housing conditions have been regarded as the basis upon which all other reforms and betterments must rest. Without decent home surroundings, light and air, proper sanitation, we do not have good citizens. All of this has been said many times before. The surprising thing is that in this country, at least, there has been comparatively little interest in it among well-to-do who desire to aid with their wealth the well-being of their fellow men. Money expended now in building serves a double purpose, meets a coincident need, the need for employment and housing.

SENATE IS URGED TO REBUKE SIMS

Resolution Hits the Admiral for Breach of Confidence.

LODGE RUSHES TO DEFENSE

Senator Borah of Idaho Approves Warning Given to Commander—Says Senate is Making Mountain Out of Mole Hill.

Washington, Jan. 21.—A resolution declaring that the action of Admiral Sims in making public "confidential instructions of the most confidential character" affecting international relations deserved the condemnation of all Americans, was introduced in the senate by Senator Walsh (Dem., N. H.), a member of the naval committee.

Senator Walsh's request for immediate consideration was denied on objection by Senator Lodge.

The resolution quoted from the letter read by Admiral Sims last Saturday before the senate committee investigating naval decorations, in which the admiral said that before he left the United States for Europe, in March, 1917, he was told by a high naval official not to "let the British pull the wool over your eyes; it is one of our business; it is the chestnuts out of the fire; we won't as soon fight the British as the Germans."

Declares Disclosure Reprehensible.

"Admiral Sims must have and should consider these instructions, if they ever were given, to be of the most confidential character," the resolution said, adding that his action in making them public deserved universal and unqualified disapproval.

"I cannot but believe that whether the individual was or was not given to Admiral Sims, the disclosure under almost any circumstances must receive the disapproval of every American," said Senator Walsh.

Senator McCarroll (Rep.), Ill., opposed the resolution, saying it was a matter that was to be later investigated by a subcommittee and Senator Lodge (Rep.) of Connecticut, in view of the murder of several policemen for which no arrests have been made.

Charles, Ireland, Jan. 21.—Another constable was shot and badly wounded last night while returning to his home here. Armed squads later searched the district. No arrests were made.

Kilrush, Ireland, Jan. 21.—In an encounter near here today a supposed Sinn Féiner was killed. Policemen were removing their belongings from the village of Coroneale to Knock in a motor van, when they were fired on from both sides of the road.

Four bicycle policemen returned the fire, killing one and capturing two of the attacking party. The body of the man fell into the river and was swept away by the current. The policemen escaped injury.

General Barnett Opposes Sims.

Before the subcommittee investigating the award of naval decorations, Major General Barnett, commandant of the marine corps, took issue with previous statements by Admiral Sims in the committee that the controversy had arisen because Secretary Daniels had not promulgated a well-defined policy to govern awards.

There was "no need for a policy promulgated by the secretary regarding medal awards," he explained, because the law authorizing the decorations was sufficiently explicit to guide commanding officers in submitting their recommendations.

His own recommendations as to marine officers who served in the United States were not followed in the majority of cases, General Barnett asserted, and he had expressed regret to Mr. Daniels, who told him "that the time had to be drawn somewhere if the value of the medals was not to be depreciated."

MOUNTAIN AGRICULTURE

Conducted by Mr. Robert F. Spence, Farm Demonstrator and Special Investigator

Rosa and Hazel Carter and the pigs they raised in their Club work

These two girls live at Hummel, a very rough section in Rockcastle county, yet in a limestone section where there is an average productive soil.

Rosa raised 7 Poland-China pigs, taking them when one day old. She made them weigh 805 pounds when 5 months old at a cost of 76 per pound. The total cost of pigs was $57.85. The value of pigs Nov. 15 was $120.75, which left her a net profit of $62.90.

Hazel raised 8 Poland-China pigs taking them when one day old. She made her pigs weigh 680 pounds when 5 months old at a cost of 84 per pound. The total cost of production of her pigs was $58.75. The value of pigs Nov. 15 was $102.00 which left her a net profit of $43.25.

The difference in profit of these two girls was caused by the death of Hazel's sow when pigs were very young. The pigs being deprived of their mother's milk were somewhat stunted in growth.

In addition to raising the pigs these girls raised one tenth of an acre of tomatoes, making a net profit $8.61.

Rosa has gotten ten boys and girls to join Junior Agricultural Club for next year, 1920. This is first club work ever done at Hummel.

What Father Thinks of Club Work.
Below is a letter received by County Agent Spence from D. L. Carter, the father of Rosa and Hazel, whose pictures and records you see Wildie, Ky., 1/19/1920.

Mr. Robert Spence,
Berea, Ky.
Dear Sir:—

I hope to be able to attend the Home and Farm Convention at Lexington. I am sorry our Fiscal Court failed to appropriate the money to pay a County Agent. I hope the farmers will respond with the full amount required to meet the very liberal offer made by the citizens of Mt. Vernon.

I consider the club work of great interest to the farmers of our county. Before my daughters joined the club they were often turning through some mail order catalogue looking for something fancy to spend their money for.

They were afraid to go through the lot where the brood sow laid. After beginning the club work they made friends of the sows, fed and looked after them and the pigs. They soon began to talk about their profit on the pigs, and the tomatoes they were raising. They now talk about their bank account and the amount they expect to clear on their crops this year. They read the agriculture papers and are far from spending their money for notions.

Very truly,
D. L. Carter

TO ALL BOYS AND GIRLS

There is still a chance for a few more boys and girls between 12 and 18 years of age to become club members for 1920. This, of course, means boys and girls of County Agent Spence's territory, Southern Madison and Rockcastle counties. Application cards can be gotten at County Agent's Office any afternoon or by letter. All correspondence will be immediately looked after. Write now if you want to raise a crop or an animal and become a member of the biggest and best organization for boys and girls in the United States. By becoming a member you are entitled to all privileges of Junior Agriculture Clubs. It gives you a chance to attend the Junior Agriculture Club Convention at Berea in July; a chance to attend State Fair; a chance to become a champion of the State of Kentucky; a chance to get a Certificate of Merit from State College of Agriculture; the best of all, a chance to become educated at home by coming in touch with the big things done in the Agricultural world by boys and girls, all over the county and the work done by our farmers.

Write today for an application card. Get your membership in as soon as possible. The opportunity is yours; take it now.

FEED AND SHELTER STOCK

It pays to feed and shelter stock. Many calves have been reported dead to County Agent, cause not known. The opinion of the County Agents is that the deaths are due, especially to young stock, for lack of proper feed and shelter. Young stock must have some good, substantial feed in order to grow bone and muscle, and a sufficient amount of fat producing feed to create heat, as well as to make bone and muscle.

If calves are sick, quit feeding frozen and bleached fodder, also damaged corn. Take a bushel of sound corn to mill and have crushed. Feed with this some shorts or ship-stuff. If good clover or cowpea hay can be had, feed it. Keep calf in shelter and let it have salt and plenty of water.

RED MARKET (POULTRY)

The market for R. I. Reds in Berea Saturday was good. Hens brought from $2 to $3 per head. Cockerels brought from $3 to $5 per head.

If you haven't your cockerels, it's time to get busy. The County Agent is always ready to help locate good stock.

PRODUCE REVIEW

Receipts of poultry are very light, partly due to bad weather and also because of stocks having been pretty well marketed.

Receipts of dressed poultry at the four large cities—New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and Boston—since January 1st, have been lighter than same period last year while the amount of stock put into storage during the same period was heavier, which would indicate a falling off in the consumption of poultry.

Trade, however, is taking all the fresh poultry offered and is now using some frozen stock, which would indicate a healthy situation.

Recent reduction in butter values no doubt, has brought about a larger demand and we have seen some reaction in the market this week. General situation is unchanged.

On account of wintry weather the movement of fresh eggs has not shown any increase. General situation is steady. With milder weather and the fact that cold storage stocks are still larger than usual, lower prices should be expected.

HOME DEPARTMENT

SELECTION FROM HOUSEWIFERY

By Lyda Ray Balderston.

Cleaning and Renovation

Renovation is renewal, and means the cost in time and money to make like new. It is economy in so far as the renovation cost of an article does not exceed the original cost. In fact, the cost of renovation should be considered well by the housewife when she purchases the certain types of household furnishings. Beds, bedding, carpets, furniture and furnishings, should be purchased only after the consideration of the cost, depreciation, such as fading, cracking, roughing and renewal cost. Fabrics may justify a large first cost if they are of material that can be cleaned, or dyed, or which is worthy of recutting. To pay for quality under such considerations justifies the purchase.

Fabrics

The first and most common type of renovation is laundering with soap and water. The housewife is so accustomed to this process in connection with her clothing that she rarely stops to consider it as renovation. However, when her attention is directed to the fact that such things as blankets, curtains, portiers, etc., which are usually sent to the dry cleaning establishment, can be renovated by an intelligent use of soap and water, the process acquires a new significance. When these furnishings are sent to the cleaner, the cost of renewal adds materially to their original cost, and so may not represent economy. Careful laundering by the housewife will eliminate the extra cost, with no harm to fabrics. And the chances are that, if so cleaned, they will be cleaned as frequently as is necessary to keep them fresh, whereas the cost of dry cleaning makes its use infrequent.

Fabric stains are unsightly and make a garment look either old or untidy if not removed. The stains that are found on household fabrics are in most cases possible to remove. Let the housewife try to remove them first with clear cold water, as half the stains may be washed out in cold water without further work and with no harm done to the fabric. Stain work outfit:

- 1 dropper for each chemical.
- 1 cup.
- 1 bowl.
- Blotting paper and cloth the color of the fabric, or white and non-fading.
- Soft cloth.
- Soft brush.

Stain re-agents:

- Alcohol.
- Ammonia.
- Borax.
- Chloroform or ether.
- Cream of tartar or salt of lemon.
- Detergent.
- Gasoline.
- Hydrochloric acid.
- Javelle water.
- Lard or tallow.
- Oxalic acid.
- Potassium permanganate.
- Soap.

Recipe for Detergent: 1 1/2 oz. of white castile soap, 1 oz. ether, 1 oz. alcohol, 4 oz. ammonia. Cut soap fine and heat in one pint of soft water until dissolved. Then add three quarts of cold water and the other ingredients. For cleaning black goods, use one quart of this liquid in one pint of warm water. If this makes the article too stiff, add more water. For removing spots from woolen goods such as mens' clothing, apply the detergent, only slightly diluted, with a sponge. It is always safer to test this detergent or any other cleaning solution with a piece of the material before attempting to remove stains, as the ether may affect the color.

To remove all unknown stains, grass and mildew, wash the stain in cold water.

To remove chocolate with cream, cocoa with cream, cream, gravies, scorch, sewing-machine grease, and tea with cream, wash with cold water and soap.

To remove blood and mucus, and pus, soak in cold water to which salt has been added, one cup of salt to eight quarts of water, then wash in warm water and soap.

To remove blood, punch, sugar, and syrup, wash in warm water until the stain disappears.

To remove grease, meat juice, and perspiration, wash in warm water and soap, or use magnesium, chalk, starch or meals—not flour.

To remove indelible pencil, stove polish, tan shoe-polish, tar or wagon grease, put lard on stain, rub well into grease spot; wash with soap and warm water. Repeat until removed.

To remove wine, put thick layer of salt on stain as soon as made; pour boiling water thru a height then the stain as soon as possible.

To remove ink and iron rust, use dilute acids (lemon-juice, sour milk, cream of tartar, rhubarb, pineapple, hydrochloric and oxalic acids. Use food acids direct without dilution; dilute hydrochloric and oxalic acids with equal quantities of water.) Apply the acid, let stand a few seconds, rinse with warm water; continue until stains disappear, then wash with soap and water.

To remove ink and stubborn stains use dilute acids and Javelle water. Apply the acid, then follow with Javelle; finally rinse with hot water and soap.

To remove old stains and stubborn stains, use dilute oxalic acid and potassium permanganate. Apply a few drops of potassium permanganate; rinse with warm water, then apply oxalic acid. Repeat until stains disappear, and finally wash with soap and water.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By REV. E. L. FITZWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody
Bible Institute of Chicago
(Copyright 1920, Western Newspaper Union)

LESSON FOR FEBRUARY 8

PETER AT LYDDA AND JOPPA.

LESSON TEXT—Acts 9:32-43.
BIBLE TEXT—The prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up.—James 5:16.
ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—Luke 8:
17-18; 9:1-2.
PRIMARY TOPIC—What a Kind Woman
Did.
JUNIOR TOPIC—What Peter Did at Lydda and Joppa.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Beauty and Influence of an Unselfish Life.

In order to grasp the significance of this lesson, we should recall the condition which prevailed in the church as suggested in verse 31. Three characteristics are outstanding:

1. Freedom from Persecution.
Saul, the ringleader of the persecuting forces, had just recently been converted, thereby disorganizing their forces, allowing the church to enjoy a breathing spell. This period of rest did not result in its growing lazy, indifferent, worldly, and forgetful of God, but in growth in grace and in the knowledge of the Lord Jesus.

2. Spiritual Growth and Development.

The real meaning of the word "ed-ified" is "built up." This does not mean merely that the members were being instructed and comforted, but that strenuous efforts on the part of the individual members, as well as the body as a whole, were being made for the advancement of the divine life.
The word "edify" contains the metaphor of some grand building or a restructure. As suggested by another,
this metaphor involves (1) a foundation;
(This is Jesus Christ—no other dare be laid (1 Cor. 3:12-13).) (2) A continuous progress. This means that a Christian's activities are purposeful
and that the work he undertakes
moves forward with the proper progress. (3) Persistent effort. This means that the present day's work begins the foundation upon which tomorrow's work must be built. Thus day by day his life is being raised higher and higher, as each step a round of material is being laid by strenuous efforts. (4) A completion.
Finally the work is done, the building is completed, the top stone is brought forth and placed.

3. Outward Growth.
Building up within the church
causes the whole work to be advanced and respected by those without,
inducing them to come and identify themselves with the cause. There can be no forward movement without upward there be a corresponding movement within.

Our lesson today is the record of two stupendous miracles. They are the greatest signs wrought since the day of Christ. The dreadful malady of palsy is vanquished, and a corpse
is re-animated by the departed soul.
The occurrence here of this miracle is in keeping with the movements of the church at this time. The Lord had promised those signs as they went forth with the gospel message. They were given as encouragements to the disciples, to convince them that the gospel did not lose any of its power
by being spread, but rather that its power increased. As the church goes everywhere preaching the Word there will be a corresponding manifestation of power.

1. The Healing of Eneas (vv. 32-35).
This man's needy condition appealed to Peter, just as men today should appeal to us in their semi-dead state.
Like his Master, Peter could not refuse the needed help. In this he did not direct attention to himself, but confidently appealed to the power in the name of Christ: "Jesus Christ hasten thee." The man who had kept his bed for eight long years immediately arose and made his bed. When the Lord hearkens it is done instantly.
Peter wisely kept this miracle from being the end by making it the means to the end. That end was the preaching of the gospel. This brought most gratifying results, for "all that dwell
in Lydda and Sharon saw him and turned to the Lord."

2. The Raising of Dorcas (vv. 36-43).
This woman was full of good works
and alms-deeds which she did, not talked of doing. She was a practical Christian woman of the kind that gets down to the practical way of showing
her love by doing deeds of helpfulness. Her death was a real loss, as was evidenced by the mourning of those who had been helped. When this good woman fell sick and died
the disciples went for Peter. Peter put them all forth. At his command
her soul came back to life in her body.
This again caused them to believe in the Lord.

Read the Bible and Think.
"It is a good plan to read a book of the Bible through rapidly at a sitting in a study garden or on a cliff
looking over the sea; then to close the book and think."—Church Family Newspaper.

Transformed into New Man.
As Leon put into the fire Joseph's rust and became clean and hot, so he that wholly turneth himself unto God puts off all slothfulness, and is transformed into a new man.—Thomas a Kempis.

The Nemesis of Sin

By REV. W. W. KETCHUM
Director of the Evening Classes,
Moody Bible Institute, Chicago

TEXT—He more your sin will find you out.—Num. 32:23.

There is no more sure word than this one of Moses to the children of Reuben and Gad. White spoken in them as they, with the rest of the tribes, stood on the east bank of the Jordan, ready to pass over into Canaan. It is a red danger signal, warning men of all time that no man can escape the results of his sin.

The physical results of sin are appalling. They may not show at once, but, given time enough, they will appear in physical disorders that baffle
the skill of physicians.

One day on the street of an Eastern city I saw coming toward me one who appeared to be a broken down, feeble old man. When we came nearer I saw that the man was not old, but young and that he evidently was smitten with some dreadful disease. Looking closer,
I recognized him as a boyhood companion and in consternation exclaimed: "Why Frank, what is the matter?" To which he replied with one word, that awful word, "Sin." Yes,
his sin had found him out in his body.

No Peace to the Wicked.
There is a passage of Scripture
which many men are proving true in their own experience. It is that word which says: "There is no peace, saith my God, to the wicked." The reason they have no peace is because their sin is finding them out in their conscience. Men try to escape an accusing conscience by putting miles between them and their sin, but wherever they are that monitor of their soul is there with them and keeps saying over and over again to them: "Thou art
the man."

Conscience cannot be subdued. It is God's alarm clock in a human soul.
Every time one sins, this divine alarm rings out its warning and then in after years, when it seems as if the years
must have buried the sin in oblivion,
memory, that plastic piece of wax upon which are indelibly written the deeds of the past, brings it up again
and conscience once more points the accusing finger, and as before says,
"Thou art the man."

Penalty Certain.
Unconfessed and unrepented sin finds one out in eternity. It may be that the consequences of sin in this life are sometimes avoided, in part at least, if not altogether; but there is a time coming when one cannot escape
the penalty of his sin, providing he has not confessed it and accepted him who is the Lamb of God that took away the sins of the world.

God tells us that it is appointed
unto man once to die and after death,
the judgment, and he warns us that it is foolish for anyone to think that he can escape the judgment of God. He tells us of "the day of wrath and revelation of the righteous judgment of God, who will render to every man according to his deeds;" so if one does escape the results of sin here, he cannot escape them in the hereafter. God will bring him to account, and there is for the one who rejects the salvation
that is offered in Christ, a judgment
of sin to come. "Some men's sins,"
says Paul, "go on beforehand to judgment and some men's sins follow after."

The One Way Out.
There is a way to escape the penalty
and power of sin. God has made that way. He tells us that he sent "his son to be the Savior of the world," and that on the cross that Son "put away sin by the sacrifice of himself." He died there for our sins, according to the Scriptures, and on the third day
by his resurrection from the dead he was declared to be the Son of God with power. "Wherefore he is able to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by him, seeing he ever liveth
to make intercession for them."

God has made it clear how men now
may, by the acceptance of the Lord Jesus Christ as their Savior, escape the judgment that is to come; how they may now pass from death unto life;
how they may now have eternal life.
Could it be any plainer than Christ
puts it when he says: "Verily,
verily I say unto you, he that heareth
my word, and believeth on him that sent it, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into judgment; but is passed from death unto life?"

One has pointed out that those who accept by faith the Lord Jesus Christ
as their Savior have: (1) A new possession, "everlasting life;" (2) a new

PROBLEMS FACING STRICKEN WORLD

Shall Chaos or Reconstruction
in Europe Follow the Great World War?

NOW WEAK AND HEARTBROKEN

In Mourning and Poverty She Counts
Her Dead and Looks With Eyes of Sadness Toward the Threatening Future.

Article II.

By FRANK COMERFORD.

August 1, 1914, was the day. On that day Germany declared war on Russia. The fire alarm ring around the world. Peasants in the field straightened their backs, listened and looked into the sun confused wondering. Flags were unfurled, bands played, faces were white, tense and serious. Men left their work and talked in groups on the street corners.
Women laid down their brooms, put aside their washing, and talked in whispers; and lights were in their eyes. Children stopped playing. Something had happened. Evil things were ahead. August 3 and 4, sunny France and Great Britain mobilizing their sons—the torch was sweeping Europe—the fire of death had started.

For four long years—heart-ach-ening years—the world ran red. Men waded through mud and blood, fought,
suffered, cursed, prayed, while back home in the manless houses women
and children worked, cried, prayed and waited. The world was mad.
Death poisoned every breath the people breathed.

It is over now, it is finished. A stunned, numbed, weak, heartbroken Europe is again sitting in the sun of peace. Europe is in dirty black rags.
The black is mourning, the rags are poverty. Her face is deeply lined—trenches made by suffering. Her eyes are downcast and dead. Hope flutters weakly in her breast; faith has faded
from her soul. Her home is a house of darkness. The fire on the hearth has turned to cold gray ashes. The kettle no longer sings, it means. Her mind is weary, her body is wasted.
Hunger has robbed her of her strength.
Her stockings, shoes, feet are blue from the cold. Her lips wear starvation color. Ice in the winter's wind lashes her shivering, half-naked body. She numbles as she stares vacantly into space—she is tired, so tired. As I beheld her it seemed to me that a face so troubled and sad
must never have known a smile.

I listened to her mutterings, I found that she was counting. Over and over again she counted on her thin, tired worn hands—she was counting her dead.

Thinking of Her Loss.

She was thinking. Her eyes looked over the hundreds of thousands of square miles of war zone, shelled with trenches, pitted and pockmarked
by shells. She saw where they fell.
No tears are in her eyes. Long ago
the hurt had reached the point where tears dry up. How upon row, line upon line, mile upon mile, white-painted wooden crosses mark their graves. For the most part they were her youngest born, her most beloved who dug deep in the soil to sleep forever in the dark dungeons.

As they fell bleeding from steel and lead, choking from gas, writhing in agony from fire, they proved in the dying word they spoke that they were mere boys, as they had shown in their fighting that they were brave men. To the people they trusted their message, and the red poppies remember
the last word of Europe's dying sons,
who went out into the great beyond
with this last word on their lips:
"Mother."

She has finished counting; an ache shudders through her bent body. She sighs and sobs. "Seven and a half million of my sons are dead."

Her thoughts turn to the living, her arms open to receive them, she holds them to her heart. They have come but how?

Some with sightless eyes, doomed to grope through the world in a never-ending darkness, a night without star-
or moon; sunless, black, hopeless days
and those, too, young men in the very morning of their day.

Others, sentenced to silence—deaf and dumb. Never again will they hear their voices nor will they hear hers.
Still others in wheel chairs, dwarfed
legless.

More hobbling on crutches, limping
on canes.

Some with empty sleeves,
Many with great scars, where once
was a handsome face.

She sees them all, her heart bleeds;
the twisted, the mangled, the torn.
She is counting them, the 12,616,017
the wounded of the war.

War's Frightful Cost.

Her voice is husky, her hands are tired, but she must count on. Six and a half million of her sons were marked
"missing and prisoners" in the official war score. Many of these have come back to her, but she does not question them—she dare not. Their faces tell of the unspeakable horrors they endured. She sees in their eyes a depth of pain that is unfathomable. She is a mother—she knows.

The war is over, but she is not over the war. Must she never stop counting? Is there no end to her losses?
The graveyards are crowded—lies thoughts turn to the dead who, while they did not die in the war, died because of the war. Those who went out in battle left life in a burst of glory.

Others there were who fell in their tracks—exhaustion, broken hearts sent them "west." She has not forgotten how the home front suffered. The stay-at-homes were not all slackers. They fought hunger and cold bent their backs beyond the straining point.
Worst of all, they waited. It is estimated that 20,000,000 civilians died
from weakness, fatigue, strain, broken hearts—the horror of waiting the strayed resistance. These were the unfettered older men and women, the swept, undernourished children. Is there any wonder that Europe has a death look in her eyes? Death has been her morning thought, it has been her night sob, and for four years more
up of months weeks, days, hours minutes and seconds death has been her Nemesis.

She is now waiting. The figures are appalling. They stagger her imagination. It is easy to write them impossible to understand their full meaning. The mind can't grasp it; the world is bewildered by the number. It is too stupendous, too horrible for understanding. Think of it, seven and a half million young men for the most part between the ages of eighteen and thirty, the youth, the strength, the spirit, the man power of Europe dead
—twenty million from civil life dead
over twelve and a half million wounded.

Who can measure this loss?
War brought death. It did more—it stopped birth. In the devastated regions of Belgium, France, Italy, Poland, parts of Russia and the Balkan countries the birth rate fell to at most nothing. In England and Wales
the birth rate in the last part of 1915
was 19.5, the lowest on record. Mat-ternity emphasized that the birth rate had fallen 12 per cent in England and Wales by 1916.

The Journal of Heredity quotes Savorgnan as having estimated that it will take England at least ten years, Germany 12 years, Italy 38 years and France 36 years to regenerate their populations. These calculations by Savorgnan were made before the full losses of the campaign of 1918.

A village in France, Berncourt,
tells what the war has done to the man power of Europe. This village, which is in the Chateau Thierry-Soissons district, had a population of a thousand people before the war. Its losses have been tabulated. Twenty-six soldiers from this village were killed in the war. Ninety-seven of the villagers died from war privations. The total of 123 is the death toll of a village of a thousand.

The figures I have quoted from the calculations of Savorgnan and Mullett
were made before the war was finished.
Since the war, estimates have been made, and these estimates show the situation to be even worse. In France
I was told that 57 per cent of the men between twenty and forty years were listed as dead or incapacitated for work. Further, that it would take France over 70 years to recover her normal population.

It is said that it will take Italy 50 years and England 25 years to regain normality of population.

The human waste of the war is more than sad memories. The loss of man power makes a grave problem. It has thrown out of balance the domestic scheme of the world. It will be felt for years. There are a great many more young women than men. Home life is bound to suffer. There will be fewer marriages, fewer children. Statistics only tell part of the story.

European Tarantula.

An eminent authority in such matters, in remarking that the tarantula
is a spider, says of that terrifying
creature that it is the Lycosa Tarantula, a species of spider found in some of the warmer parts of Italy and Spain. When full grown it is about the size of a chestnut and of a brown color. Its bite was at one time supposed to be dangerous and to induce
a kind of "dancing disease," but now it is known not to be worse than the sting of a common wasp.

It is an old folk, extending to remote times, that the bite of this spider would produce epilepsy or a strange dancing mania in its victims
and that this epilepsy or madness
could be relieved only by a particular kind of music. The tarantula of Italy and Spain—and it is found in those countries today—has hairy legs with black markings on them.

America's Debt to Jews.

Jews figured very prominently in the discovery of America by Columbus according to Rabbi David Philipson of Cincinnati. The first man who stepped on the shore of the new world was the interpreter of the expedition, Luis de Torres, a Jew. Bernat, the ship surgeon, was also a Jew, as were several members of the crew.

It is also now said to be established
that the long-credited belief that Queen
Isabella pawned her jewels to furnish Columbus with the funds for the trip is a legend. These funds, it is said, were furnished by two Jews, Luis de Santangel and Gabriel Sanchez. A letter by Columbus to Sanchez is still extant, in which he gives some account of his exploits.

Who Knows?

A friend of mine called upon a newly wedded pair and I happened to drop in. The bride had been a widow.
My friend remarked to me, "You introduced them to each other, didn't you?" "Why, yes," I foolishly blurted out, "I introduced her to her first and second husbands and who knows but what I'll be the one to introduce her to her third one?"—Exchange.

Care of the Skin

By Dr. Margaret S. Grant, Associate College Physician

The skin has several important functions. Of these, three may be here mentioned.

1. It protects the body.
2. It carries off waste matter
from the body.
3. Its appearance is an index of bodily health.

Body Protection.

The skin covers the whole body
and keeps the more delicate tissues from being so easily injured. Then too, many disease germs which might enter the body are kept out by a sound skin; for they cannot enter except through some break in the skin. For this reason it is important that the skin be kept in a clean, healthy condition, and that care be taken not to bruise or cut the skin. If it is accidentally injured a little tincture of iodine
swabbed over the injured place
will lessen the danger of poisoning
by germs.

Carries Off Waste Matter

In the skin are numerous very small tubes called sweat glands.
These glands carry perspiration or "sweat" from the body out through the pores of the skin, and are at work constantly day and night summer and winter. In this perspiration is waste matter which the body must get rid of, and which would act as a poison if kept in the body. So the pores of the skin must be kept open by frequent washing of the skin that they may not become stopped up by dirt or dried sweat. In the winter a bath with warm water and a good soap
should be taken at least once a week,
and in the summer at least twice

a week, and clean underwear put on after each bath. When one is sick frequent bathing is even more important as there is more poison in the system which should be gotten rid of.

The excessive use of powder and paint on the skin will stop up the pores, so that instead of making the skin more beautiful to look at, they harm it, by hindering its work, and it becomes diseased, pimply and muddy in appearance.

As an Index of Health

A muddy skin tells us that the waste matter of the body is not all being carried away, but is poisoning
the system. The skin cannot do alone all this work of keeping the body clear of waste matter, but is aided by the lungs, the kidneys, and the bowels, and if these are not all doing their part, the skin is overworked and becomes diseased. So we must see to it that the lungs have plenty of fresh air to help them in their work; that the bowels move
daily; and that we are drinking plenty of water to keep the kidneys
active and flushed out.

A yellow skin usually indicates malaria, or a sluggish or diseased liver, and for these conditions a physician should be consulted. A sallow skin may result from the excessive use of tobacco. The nicotine in the tobacco acts as a poison in the body, and the skin in its effort
to rid the body of the poison itself becomes poisoned. Indigestion, improper food, too much food, cause various skin eruptions; lack of cleanness paves the way for such diseases as ringworm and itch.

Rustic Furniture for the Farm Home

Prof. John F. Smith

Everyone is familiar with the home where no convenient outdoor seats are found, where there are no
swings for children, no flower
stands, and where no rocking chairs are seen. Some of these homes are exceedingly poor, some are not. The people who live in some of them are exceedingly busy, but some have much time on their hands. This spare time can, in many instances,
be used in making things for the home.

Every family that lives close to a thicket may have plenty of seats,
swings, flower stands, chairs, rock-ing chairs, tables and other pieces for the making. Chairs that will prove a great comfort and will last for years may be had for a little labor; tables for outdoor and indoor use may be made with little trouble; comfortable swings and seats are within reach of almost everybody who has a thicket at hand and who can use a few tools.

Now is the time of year to cut poles for making these pieces. The hushes should be cut and trimmed before the middle of March. The poles may be piled either in the weather or under a shed to season.

What Materials to Use.

Sassafras poles are perhaps the most satisfactory. They season readily, the bark remains tight and attractive, the wood splits and works easily, and the supply in many localities is almost inexhaustible. Fence-rows about neglected fields abound in sassafras just the size for making any of the articles
mentioned. Hickory is excellent,
but its supply is not so great. Oak,
chestnut, laurel, sourwood, dogwood, are good.

What Tools are Needed

A handsaw, a hatchet, an inch and half-inch chisel, a brace and bits, a drawing knife. These tools will cost less than $10.00. They may be bought for one-fourth the price of a good shot gun, and 25 cents worth of nails will make all the furniture
a family needs. I used about 2 cts.
worth of nails in making a table
which has been in service for over two years.

How Much will this Furniture Cost?

If poles are close at hand it costs
nothing but the nails and the time to make it. There is enough time spent at nothing of importance to supply all the families in the average neighborhood with all the seats,
swings, chairs, tables, etc., they need. The cost of the pieces, not counting the time, will be something as follows:

Table, 3 cents, porch swing, 25
cents, rustic seat, 3 cents, couch, 5
cents, chair, 3 cents, flower stand, 5 cents.

Every man and boy who can drive
a nail or use a handsaw can have all the seats and swings and comfortable porch chairs he wants if he will only take the time to make them.

Why not have them?

National Loan For Belgium.

Brussels.—A group of Belgian bankers has decided to subscribe 50 per cent of the national loan at 2,500,000, 000 francs, it is announced. The Government intends, it is stated, to take over all loans launched by the large cities of Belgium, in view of the opening of the grant national loan, through which the Government would be able to assist in financing the various communities.

MRS. BOWLING DEAD

Mrs. Nancy Elizabeth Bowling, a much respected woman, was stricken with apoplexy at the home of her daughter, Mrs. A. B. Bowling, in London, Ky., at about the supper hour on Sunday night and died at 1:15 a. m. Monday morning, sinking into unconsciousness soon after the attack and never rallying until her death. The children who lived in various parts of the county were immediately notified of her death, and were at the burial.

Mrs. Bowling, whose maiden name was Collier, being the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Collier, was born in Owensley county, Ky., on April 25, 1859, and was married to Dr. J. C. Bowling Aug. 20, 1875. To this union were born nine children, eight of whom survive her as follows: R. E. Bowling, Pauls Valley, Okla.; Mrs. G. B. Williams, Inman, Va.; Mrs. P. C. Combs, Louisville, Ky.; P. F. Blue Lick

Blue Lick, Jan. 26.—Many have been plowing between showers, so anxious are they to resume the work and profit by the mistakes of last year. Many farmers gave a good illustration of the story of the dog with a piece of meat in crossing a stream dropped his meat to chase his reflection in the water, thereby sustaining irreparable loss. So in the mad rush and excitement of high prices many farmers, to get their tobacco off to market, neglected their corn crops and in consequence of the incessant rain they find it rotting in the field. The loss of corn, the staple product of this section, necessitates the spending of the money received for tobacco for corn at a higher cost than they produced it.—The Sunday-school at this place was well attended January 25th. The thrilling message brought by Mr. Christopher, a worker in Berea College, was received with deep interest. The sad fate of Ananias and Sapphira was so graphically presented that the impression we believe, will be received and acted upon that those who have formed the habit of deliberate falsehood will try, by God's help, to reform ere they are doomed to a spiritual death.—Frank Campbell's little son, Luther, has been very sick the past week, but is better.—Frances Sproule, a Berea student, spent the week-end with Mrs. John Johnson and Mrs. Flannery.—Mrs. Johnson, who has been sick for several weeks, is better.—Mary Barrett is visiting Bert Johnson this week.—We missed the genial presence and bright smile of our faithful secretary, Mr. Fry, at our Sunday-school.
